FOR YOUR SAFETY

During winter months, please wear your boots and carry in your sneakers or shoes. Thank you.

Ask the Physical Therapist...

What is Osteoporosis and Why is PT important?

Osteoporosis is a condition that causes your bones to become brittle and weak, which in turn makes your body prone to fracturing. Osteoporosis can affect everyone! Men and women of any age can be diagnosed. Caucasian and Asian women over 50 are most susceptible.

Symptoms: Back and neck pain, stooped posture and loss of height - to name a few.

Treatment: You can help prevent bone loss and rebuild your bone mass in several ways. The three most common are exercise, diet or medication.

Why does exercise help? Exercise releases growth hormones that stimulate osteoblast (cells of the bone) to grow.

A PT will help you create a safe exercise routine. Did you know your spine is more loaded with pressure when you are sitting versus when you are standing? Do you have osteoporosis? Do you feel you sit too much throughout the day? A PT is a movement specialist that can create the right exercise routine for you to avoid unnecessary spinal loading, all while optimizing your strength, mobility, balance and bone health.

If you are having any questions about your exercise routine and if it's safe for your osteoporosis, consult a Physical Therapist.
